

an in depth report

You receive a comprehensive 20 page personal career guidance report. It describes your abilities, your career interests, your personality and your learning style.

When it comes to understanding your abilities and the direction of your talents, the pattern of your results is more important than how well you score on an individual test.

The relationships between the results of the first 6 tests suggest the types of work and environment that seem best suited to you and which you are likely to enjoy most.

The last section of the tests is concerned with issues of temperament and the way in which you might go about work. It looks at things like mental flexibility and confidence.

Your test scores tell us what you are likely to be good at and your questionnaire results tell us what you are interested in. Both are used to generate your career suggestions.

Your report includes 12 career suggestions, selected from a comprehensive database of careers available in Australia.

Your Morrisby Report will give you valuable information and help you plan your future.

It's your future . . .

plan your future with the Morrisby Report

- What would I be good at?
- What would interest me?
- What career would I enjoy most?

For most people these are hard questions to answer with any certainty. Really knowing your strengths and interests and how these relate to the world of work is something that builds over time and from experience.

Your Morrisby Report will accelerate this process. It will help you make more informed decisions about your future – about courses and careers.

what's involved?

Firstly you complete a questionnaire telling us about your interests.

Then to build a picture of your personal strengths and abilities you complete a series of 12 paper and pencil tests.

The tests do not measure what you have learnt but look at what you could do – your potential. The whole process takes around three and a half hours but this is time well spent as the results give you much of the information you need to choose the right career for you.

The World of Work (below) is one part of your Morrisby Report. It is a map of interests and how these relate to careers. In your report we mark in your preferences, showing you what types of work you are interested in.

is it worth doing?

The most recent independent surveys of students between the ages of 16 and 18 all support the value of the Morrisby Report.

- 97% (of 360) said the report had identified personal strengths and 92% said their choice of course options had been influenced by the Morrisby Report.
- 91% (of 188) said that they had a better idea of what they would do after leaving school, and 99% were glad to have taken the tests.
- 81% (of 253) would definitely recommend the tests to others and 15% possibly would.

In the last 5 years Morrisby Reports have been prepared for over 300,000 people.
